And not one of those men dared to a raise a voice in that convention. Why? Because it was instilled in their souls that they dare not question the veracity of an apostle."

The speaker declared that he admired the courage and honesty of James H. Moyle, state chairman of the Democratic convention. He said he also in many acticulars admired the words of Judge William H. King, but he said he was surprised to hear Judge King say that he would lay aside his personal predilections and admit the right of the leader to him upon moral lines. Attorney Sanford declared the church decide his moral questions for him, he must also let his church determine what is a moral question. He said that he did not think Judge King say that he said not think Judge King graited the importance of those words when he snoke them and that when be comes to think them over he cannot stand by what he said.
